

DESIGN AND CONSTRUCTION OF A HOPKINSON BAR

by

ZENONOS ANDREAS

Project report submitted to the
DEPARTMENT OF MECHANICAL ENGINEERING

of the

HIGHER TECHNICAL INSTITUTE

Nicosia , Cyprus

In partial fulfillment of the requirements for the diploma of

TECHNICIAN ENGINEER

in

MECHANICAL ENGINEERING

1994

Project Supervisor: Dr L.G. Lazari

4

ABSTRACT

To design a bar from steel and to identify the location of strain gauges which will be used to measure strain.

To construct an^d excitation system which in this case is a firing mechanism (using cartridge).

By using the appropriate instrumentation to measure the strain due to propagating shock-waves.

C O N T E N T S

	Pages
Introduction
1.0 Introduction	1
1.1 Shock spectrum	2
 Random Vibrations
2.0 Fourier Integral	5
2.1 Evaluation of Fourier's Integral	6
 Vibration of Rods
3.0 Vibration of rods	10
 Shock Test Machine
4.0 Shock test machine	14
 Strain measurement
5.0 Strain measurement	17
5.1 Complete strain measuring system	21
Strain Measurement due to propagating shock-waves..	23
Conclusions	31
References	32
Appendices	34